Just pick the track you want to listen to, and click on the button below the track, to listen to the chords. To view a chord diagram, click on the arrow to the right of the button, below the track and on the left of the pitch wheel. By clicking on the arrow, you are given a text view of the selected note and chord. There are two ways to search the database. One is by clicking on the word with which you want to search. In this case, you can look up the chords in the set "Popular" by clicking on the word "Popular". Another way to search for the chords you want is to click on the button at the bottom of the screen. There are then ten buttons with chords. Choose the chord you want and the song will come up. New proteins that will affect the development of the mind during childhood 02.09.2015
Scientists at the MRC Human Genetics Unit (MRC HGU) and Imperial College London, the Wellcome Trust Sanger Institute and the Spanish National Genome Research Centre, has been published in the journal Nature Neuroscience. People with mutations in these five genes have a higher risk of developing neuropsychiatric disorders including autism and schizophrenia. The disease-associated mutations in these genes also affect how well people are able to think and reason. The study, which started in 2009, is the most comprehensive genetic analysis of the brain so far. It revealed that the genes affect the brain in four different ways: they affect the production of new brain cells and regulate which ones are generated; they influence the speed at which information is processed in the brain; they are involved in cell-to-cell communication; and they control how much information from the environment is passed on to the brain. The study of these genes is important because they are involved in a wide range of brain disorders, from neurodevelopmental disorders like autism and schizophrenia, to cancer and mental health problems like depression.
